Walking on Eggs

The team gets to crack their collaboration code by getting to know more about each other, gradually moving from safe to more interesting business topics.

Key steps

People silently line up: first by height, house number etc., gradually moving from these safe topics to more interesting (business) ones.

Only once everyone's in place are they allowed to speak and discuss, and evaluate how they got there.

Most interesting line-up questions relate to other people's perspectives on what they think other people's opinions are.

If you have more time available, you can also ask the group what they would like to know of the group, and ask them to line up again.
