Best Practice Sharing (1:1)

An hour a week with a peer from a non-competing company remains the simplest, most durable way to keep learning as a leader.

Key steps

This is the practice InspiringPeople itself was built on: taking one hour a week to meet managers from non-competing companies purely to exchange best practices, one on one, without an agenda beyond genuinely helping each other.

Bundle your own best practices — in a deck, or for real in a book — and exchange them regularly with people in similar roles at non-competing companies. Kept up over years, it compounds: it's the format that took its own founder from first-time manager to CEO.
